

historical fiction, mystical

Self-love

Surprising twist or unexpected ending

slide to description

translated into over 40
languages,
though some sources say 78

rating

BOOK DESCRIPTION

This classic by Elif Shafak twirls the modern story of an aggrieved wife with the historical yet spiritual tale of Shams of Tabriz and Rumi, discussing the strength of Love and Sufism. The book entails in itself the forty rules of love, each explored with a new narrative. The lines relate life lived 700 years ago with lived now. While reading, you may laugh, cry, and perhaps reflect to your definition of love. The piece invites you to listen to your heart, question your perceptions and foresee the sacred every day.

READAGRAM

tap for say thanks

“

Don't go with the flow,
be the flow.

~Elif Shafak

—

asif.annotates

READAGRAM

“

Where there is love, there is bound to be a heartache.

~Elif Shafak

📷 asif.annotates

READAGRAM

“

No matter your destination, let every journey be a voyage inward; for the soul's true path lies within.

~Elif Shafak

—

asif.annotates

READAGRAM

“

Be grateful for every thorn others cast your way; for one day, those thorns may bloom into flowers.

~Elif Shafak

asif.annotates

READAGRAM

“

Finally I understood that people heard something unusual, they called it a dream.

~Elif Shafak

asif.annotates

READAGRAM

“

Every true love and friendship
is a story of unexpected transformation.

~Elif Shafak

asif.annotates

READAGRAM

“

“The wound is the place where the Light enters you.”

A paraphrased line of Rumi echoed in the book

asif.annotates

READAGRAM

“

Want all 40 Rules of Love in one click?

Skip the scroll

All 40 Rules of Love; revealed
A clear, soulful summary
A quiz to help the heart reflect

READAGRAM

 Link in Bio

“

💭 If you've read this one, tell me what part hit you the hardest.

📌 And if not—save this post. You'll want to come back to it.

Go over to Readagram for all the rules
Follow for more..!

📷 asif.annotates

READAGRAM

tap for say thanks